Community Education Meeting Series
Presents:

Making Friends

By Sam Towers

Towers Behavior Services LLC

Many individuals with disabilities do not make friends easily, leaving them at a great disadvantage. Friends enrich one's life considerably and give individuals the opportunity to practice social skills in less threatening situations.

This training will give the participants the knowledge necessary to structure play dates and other social interactions so that individuals with disabilities can make friends with a greater variety of individuals. This training is applicable to many settings, including home, school, and the community.
